

Media Release

Immediate

Anti-bullying organisation Angels Hope teams up with Suicide Call Back Service

A new partnership between Angels Hope and Suicide Call Back Service aims to prevent bullying-related suicides in Australia.

As co-founder of anti-bullying organisation, Angels Hope, Reuben Cunningham chose to work with Suicide Call Back Service because of their shared goal.

“We are both committed to helping to save lives,” Mr Cunningham said.

“Angels Hope is determined to do everything we can to stop any more bullying related suicides, and we believe that Suicide Call Back Service is the best organisation for us to work with and help raise much needed funds.”

Angels Hope works to promote awareness, put a stop to bullying, and help prevent bullying related suicides in Australia.

The Suicide Call Back Service provides free 24/7 professional counselling via phone, video or online to anyone affected by suicide across the country.

“I have visited the Suicide Call Back Service counselling centre, and I have seen first hand what an invaluable and critical service they offer to vulnerable Australians.”

Suicide Call Back Service Philanthropy Relationship Manager, Michelle Rowles said the service is thrilled to have the support of Angels Hope.

“Chloe Cunningham’s personal story of overcoming the bullying she experienced as a teen is extremely powerful and inspiring, and her commitment to help others who have been in a similar situation is to be applauded.

“On behalf of Suicide Call Back Service, we thank Angels Hope for their support, and we look forward to working together to help and support even more people.” Ms Rowles said.

For media enquiries or more information, contact:

Reuben Cunningham – 0439 885 375

About Angels Hope

Founded by Reuben Cunningham and his daughter Chloe, Angels Hope works to promote awareness, put a stop to bullying, and prevent bullying related suicides in Australia.

www.angelshope.org.au.

About the Suicide Call Back Service

The Suicide Call Back Service is available to all Australians 24/7 via telephone, online and video. All staff are professional counsellors, psychologists or social workers, and provide a dedicated service specifically helping those who are feeling suicidal themselves, worried about a friend, family member or colleague, as well as those bereaved by suicide.

Suicide Call Back Service – 1300 659 467

www.suicidecallbackservice.org.au